News release

Met Office web site

29 November 2006

As part of a series of planned improvements to the Met Office web site, we have made some significant changes to www.metoffice.gov.uk.

We have been asking for your views about the Met Office web site for a period of time and many of your suggestions - such as improved navigation and increased access to weather data – have been incorporated on the new web site. We have included guides to help view the new weather information that is available.

We hope you will enjoy using the new site and look forward to any suggestions about future improvements that you would like to see. Please use the feedback form to send in your comments.
